Redundant Entry

“Why tell you something twice? Remember what I said the first time, please!”

Who this helps: Cognitive Impairments, Memory Impairments, Motor Impairments

SUCCESS CRITERION 3.3.7 · LEVEL A

Redundant Entry

Information previously entered by or provided to the user is auto-populated if required again, reducing the need for redundant entry.

Principle 3: Understandable

Guideline 3.3: Input Assistance

What each role can do

Product manager

Minimize the need for users to re-enter information they've already provided.

Designer

Design forms and interfaces that leverage auto-population for previously entered information.

Developer

Implement auto-population of fields based on previously entered information.

Tester

Test to ensure that information is correctly auto-populated, reducing the need for redundant entry.

Once it is fixed

> “Seeing my info already there when I need it again makes everything smoother and faster. Thanks for valuing my time and effort!”
